A CINGALESE VENDOR.

The Rich Collection of Gems Held by Peddler in Cevlon. I was sitting one afternoon on the beautiful wide veranda of the Galle Face hotel, Colombo, Ceylon, says a writer in Donahue's Magazine. roar of the breakers pounding upon the beach made pleasant music, and in ELOCUTION AND ORATORY the translucent emerald brine some laughing natives were splashing merrily. A light hand touched my shoulder, and a barefooted Cingalese stood before me.

"Would you like to buy some stones?" he asked, in his pleasant voice.

These peddlers of gems are very numerous in Ceylon and threaten to become a nuisance to the traveler. They are not allowed to enter the hotels, and I once saw one of them actually beaten out of the Oriental, in Colombo. Hence it was that before addressing me my Cingalese friend glanced furtively up and down the long veranda to see that he was unobserved by the minions of the hotel.

He took from beneath his blouse a bundle of white cloth, which he opened, displaying about a pint of rubies, carbuncles, moonstones and cat's-eyes. As I had nothing to do I looked through them, after explaining to the sable merchant that I had no intention of buying. The collection must have been worth many thousand dollars, judging by individual specimens, but apart from his merchandise the barefooted vendor, costume and 965 Pu 915 PM all, might have been assessed at about

A River Flowing Inland. On the African shore, near the Gulf of Aden, and connecting the Lake of Assal with the main ocean, may be found one of the most wonderful rivers in the world. This natural curiosity in the shape of a river does not flow to but from the ocean toward the inland. The surface of Lake Assal is nearly seven hundred feet below the sea level, and it is fed altogether by this paradoxical river, the latter being about twenty-two miles in length. It is said of immense volume (especially at high 1939 pm 1935 pm tide) furnishes exactly enough water to counterbalance the extraordinary evaporation of the lake, and that in consequence the lake's surface re-

DEFENDING THE LAZY MAN. Harmless Individual Who Is Too Often

Abused by the Busybodies, It is the custom of this world's busybodies to speak slightingly of the lazy man. This custom is due primarily perhaps to the fact that the energetic soul is ever on the lookout for objects upon which to expend its superfluous force, but it is also largely referable to the inability of the active temperament to see matters from the lazy man's point of view. This looking down upon the indolent is, after all, but a matter of convention, and no doubt if the truth were known-for the slothful mind is not given to bragging -it would be found that the lazy man has as good reason for contemning the busybody as has the busybody for pointing the finger of scorn at the lazy man. The Boston Transcript sees reasons for thinking that the indolent man is actuated by motives pure and altruistic in refraining from undue exercise of body or mind, and if he had his due the record of his virtues might ever be clothed in the most enlogistic language; for, like the lily of the valhe toils not, neither does he spin, and there is Scripture warrant for believing that even Solomon in all his glory was never rigged out like the lazy lily.

The attributes of the inactive man, even of a negative quality, are a help and blessing to his energetic contemporazies. By refraining altogether or doing as little work as possible, he thereby creates a scarcity in the labor market, thus giving others an opportunity to earn their bread; whereas, if all the lazy men were to turn to and work, thousands now regularly employed would have nothing to do, and unprecedented misery would be the consequence. But it is not just to decide off-hand that the lazy man's attributes are negative. Very likely he aims to be what he is, a friend of humanity. He perceives undoubtedly how eager the majority of his kind is to be ever busy about something, and in the goodness of his heart and with a disinterested devotion which is deserving of the highest praise, it is fair to suppose that his only concern is to increase the happiness of those about him. He not only gives others an opportunity for physical labor by his amiable self-denial, but his persistent and consistent idleness furnishes all who know him with perennial men exercise. His laziness gives others the means whereby they can earn a living, and it also and at the same time makes those others happy and in love with themselves by having him as a sort of antithesis, which by contrast adds force and luster to the qualities which in their self-conceit are regarded as superexcellent.

The lazy man, therefore, not only does no harm in the world, but, on the contrary, does much good. This fact never will be appreciated unless the lazy men should all at once forsake laziness and become workers. But lack of appreciation does not worry the lazy man; he is not given to worriment. In his unselfishness he is willing others should monopolize that as well as the cark and care of this ecoming a Fushionable Pastime for the Early Morning Hours. The bicycle is winning distinction, writes a Paris correspondent of the New York Tribune. Since Lord Dufferin began to take his morning constitutional rides on a low bicycle in the Bois the steel horse has become fashionable, but only between eight and eleven in the forenoon. Clemenceau, who, if a tribune of the people, likes to pass for being "chie," has dismounted from his park hack to cycle in the morning. Zola takes lessons don. and hopes soon to be a good rider. WONDERFUL WORKS OF ART. THERE were over one hundred colossal statues in the city of Rhodes, be sides the great bronze image that bestrode the harbor. THE great show pictures of Greece were the illustrations of Homer by Polygnotos. They were painted in a public hall near the temple of Apollo at Delphi, and were considered won-ders of the world for six hundred years. In the vatican at Rome there is a marble statue with natural eyelashes, the only one, it is believed, with this peculiarity in the world. It represents Ariadne sleeping on the island of Naxos at the moment when she was deserted

THE excavators at Delphi recently dug up a colossal marble statue of Apollo. The sculpture is of the best antique school, and the statue itself is excellently preserved, with the exception that the nose is broken. It somewhat resembles the Apollo of Tenea in the museum at Munich.

It was learned that the ship had made a fine run down the Pacific coast and around the Horn, but when near the equator she had been caught in one of the dreaded calms that prevail in that latitude. For three months she remained within a distance of half a mile from where she struck the calm, and during that time there was not enough wind to fill even the lightest of her sails. Finally a small curworld, the exercise of body and of rent, probably made by a storm many miles away, appeared and served to send her slowly out of the locality, which threatened at one time to be come a place of death for all on board. On this current the ship drifted for almost another month. Then a welcom wind carried her back into the pathe

A VEGETABLE BONANZA A Root That Is Often Quoted as Being

the Most Valuable High prices are often paid at certain times for drugs such as quinine, cocaine and others, but a drug is used in North China which in actual value far surpasses anything which has been known here. The substance in question is called ginseng, and is the root of Aralia quinquefolia. It is so highly valued as a tonic and stimulant medicine in China that it is sold at from twenty to two hundred and fifty times its weight in silver, sometimes for five hundred times that amount. Pearson's Monthly states, however, that it possesses no important medicinal properties. Next to China the drug is produced in good quality in Corea, and is the principal article of export from Corea into China. So much is this the case that the Co-reans are loth to part with any seeds of the plant lest their practical monopoly in this root should be invaded. The wonder is that with such a muchused commodity at such a price steps are not taken to cultivate it in sufficient quantity so as to adjust the balance between supply and demand. The reduction, for example, in the price of quinine was largely the result of increased cultivation of the cinchona plant, and the same may be said of cocaine in respect to the cocoa plant. Perhaps, however, the foreign substi-tutes of the real product, ginseng. which reach the Chinese markets from North America and elsewhere, interfere with the native production. But with silver in one scale and portions of the highly-esteemed root in the other, it seems reasonable to conclude that the cultivation of the Aralia quinquefolia in North China would be remuperative, whatever the cost and trouble. A "Scooper" "Scooped." Kate Field's Washington relates that when Senator Stanford was about to bring forward a certain important measure, a Washington correspondent for a San Francisco paper was instructed to secure a "scoop" in the form of an interview with the senator, outlining the proposed legislation. The article having been written, was left with Mr. Stanford for correction Next day the writer returned for his manuscript and received great praise from the senator for his excellence The correspondent's eyes beamed with delight and pride, and, after waiting for the senator to pause in his eulogies, he modestly ventured to ask if he might take the manuscript now and mail it. "Oh, that reminds me," answered the senator, "I gave your manuseript to-day to one of the press associations, to be sent to all the California newspapers. I thought it was a shame, after you had done such a splendid piece of work, that you should see it in print in only one place. Yes, sir, your interview will be in the hands of every newspaper reader in the state. of California to morrow morning.

The duke of Marlborough had the reputation of being singularly discreet and adroit in dealing with spies, and it is on record that when the hero of Blenheim was commanding in Ger many he on one occasion called a comp ell of war to determine whether the enemy should be attacked on the following day. Every officer present was in favor of attacking; but the duke himself professed so decided a repugnance to the step that the council submitted to his superior judgment and adjourned. Immediately afterwards Mariborough gave Prince Eugene seeret orders to prepare for battle on the following day, adding that a spy war present at the council of war who would certainly report its decision to the enemy, and that it was necessary to deceive him by adopting the ruse to which the duke had recourse

An Infantile Prodict

An extraordinary infantile prodigy has been discovered in China in a little girl four years old, who passed succensfully an examination for literary honors at the Hong Kong university, and wrote "a concise essay" that made the examiners marrel because of the mature thought exhibited in it.
